A VISION OF GOD. Subject of Forceful Sermon by Rev. C. Ricketts at Congregational

Rev. C. H. Ricketts preached at the Greeneville Congregational church Sunday morning on A Vision of God, taking for a text Rev. 22:4, "And they shall see his face." As the writer closes the book of Revelation he holds up before the innumerable throng their trlumphant reward. Using an expression that combines every excellence and intensifies every felecity, he says: "And they shall see his face." intimating a degree of fellowship not experienced before.

Why express so great a thought by

Why express so great a thought by such a commonplace illustration? Be-sause writers of the Bible use the word "face" for the thing itself; the face of the deep is the deep; the face of the sky is the glory of the firmament d; the face of Bod is God Him.

Face is more expressive of character han any other feature. Nothing like Face is more expressive of character than any other feature. Nothing like the human face to express the finer feelings of the human soul. Stamped upon his face are a man's habits, passions, temperament. Bismarck's face was the face of iron mingled with strong red blood. The idiot, the drunkard, the consumptive need not speak—the face tells the story. An important question here arises: How can man the tangible ever look upon God the intangible? "No man hath seen God at any time." How do we reconcile all this with the triumphant vision of the text? Both statements are true. It is through the mediatorship of Jesus Christ. Combining as the Christhood does the divine and the human, it must be in and through Him that the divine and the human meet.

Mark that the words "shall see" apply to both the time element and the condition element. "They shall see his face" in the future, for

"He is fitting up our mansion Which eternally shall stand,"

Which eternally shall stand,"

and the face seen will not be the tearstained face of Bethany nor the marred visage of the tragedy of the cross, but that of Lord of Lords and King of Kings.

The condition element is also important. It is not so much when shall we see his face as how. The face is responsive to environment. Stand in blue light, and your face will be blue;
face the midnight, and it will be black;
let the goiden sunlight pour upon you,
and it will catch the gleams of the white light. Maud Ballington Booth's face struck ail Paris with its spirituel;
a face purposeful and pure, hence with characteristic quickness she was dubbed "the modern Madonna."

Philosophy tells us that we see nothing without the rudiments of which do not already exist within, It is poetry, painting and music in the soul that discover their counterpart in the outlying world. It is only as we live the life of God in Christ shall we be able to see Him as He is,
Through great tribulation the innumerable company had come to a knowledge of God, and knowledge had given sight. The great lights of the Christtian church are those who have struggled up to the dawn by imbibing the tian church are those who have strug-gled up to the dawn by imbibing the spirit of their Master. My brother, would you see the face of Christ? Then you must look at him through the eyes of a godly life.

CAPTAIN HAGBERG CHOSEN MAJOR

Had a Majority of the 45 Ballots Cast, as Announced Saturday Afternoon-Four Captains Received Votes for the Office-Changes in Third Company.

It was announced from Hartford Saturday afternoon that Capt. John A. Hagberg of this city, in command of the Third company, C. A. C., had been chosen as major to fill the vacancy caused by the rettrement of Major Hull of New London. The votes of the officers entitled to vote on the matter vers in by Wednesday, but the countling was not done until Saturday afterling was not done until Saturday after-noon.

The result was not a surprise to the friends of Captain Hagberg, who had expected that he would be selected.

CAPT. JOHN A. HAGBERG. Chosen for Major.

There were four captains of the corps who received votes, the ballot resulting as follows: Captain Hagberg, Norwich, 23; Captain Smith, Greenwich, 17; Capt. G. E. Hawes, Bridgeport, 4; Capt. David Connor, New London, 1. By his election to the office of major, Captain Hagberg will now be obliged to take an examination for the position before the examining board when that body convenes the next time, but he will remain as captain until after the board's decision, and (if successful) his appointment and commission are received. However, whether he passes the examination or not, of which there need be no fear, he must give up the position as captain of the company, as prescribed by the regulations, and a call for an election of his successor as captain can soon be expected, but whether It will take place at once or not until after the board's decision is not known.

Captain Hagberg has an excellent record in the Connecticut National guard. He is a native of Vesterik, Sweden. He confisted in the militia on March 25, 1889, in Company C. Third infantry, and became corporal and sergeant, and on Oct. 27, 1892, was made second Heutenant. On Nov. 6, 1894, he was made first lleutenant and on Feb. 25, 1896, he became captain, but resigned Jan. 4, 1897. He re-enlisted again in the same company May 10, 1897, and served until May 1, 1899, being advanced to corporal and sergeant, and during which time he was out in the regular army in the Spanish-American war. He left here with Company C, Third regulars, C, V., and was made sergeant July 2, 1898. On Nov. 14, 1898, he was made first lieutenant and was mustered out March 20, 1893.

In the state militia he again took tenant and was mustered out March 20, 1839.

In the state militia he again took office as first lieutenant of Company C April 4, 1901, and was made captain Dec. 10, 1803, which office he has since held, with credit to the state and to himself. He has always been a popular officer with his men, who regret his leaving the company, although they consider him the man for the office.

Inasmuch as there is bound to be a vacancy for captain in the company, the members are considering the filling and the probability is that both First Lieut. E. N. Coleman, Jr., and Second Lieut. George Church will be advanced in office, leaving the position of the second lieutenant open to be filled from the company. There are none on the eligible list for that office among the members of the company and it is necessary to be on such a list in order to be nominated for the office. There are, however, one or two retired officers on the list.

According to section 3010 of the gencake and coffee were served.

The first meeting in a series of three brought together the cribbage experts of the Lafayette club and St. Louis society in the latter's rooms on Sunday. The St. Louis society at the end of play was 48 points in the lead. The six players on each side were: St. Louis club—Phillias Charron, Napoleon Beausoliel, Sr., Napoleon Beausoliel, Jr., George Charron, Mathias Hebert, Joseph Fregeau- Lafayette club—Hormidas Germain, Moise Petelle, Charies Monty, Frank Mathleu, Saul Germain, Joseph Tellier. The committee will report progress at a meeting next Sunday. Papers of incorporation were received by the club on Thursday night and as the sum of money raised by the sale of stock is now stated to be more than half enough to put up the proposed hall, the club will soon be in a position to start work on the new building. The excavation will be begun as early as practicable.

Letter from Rev. E. H. Smith Gives Graphic Account of Prosperity and Progress in Manila-Sunshine Club

In a letter from Rev. Edward H. The following is an account of their stop at Manila:

Catholic Men Atttending Services. Catholic Men Attending Services.

On Christmas Sunday we attended one of the great cathedrals, which was filled with hundreds of worshippers, and of the crowds a large proportion were young men. If such was the case in the scores of other churches on that day, and we have no reason to believe otherwise, then a larger proportion of the poeple of Manila attended service than in most of our American cities, it was certainly good to see the hold that the catholic church sas upon the multitude of the people.

Christmas Exercises in Schools

Christmas Exercises in Schools.

It was our privilege to attend the Christmas exercises of one of the large city schools, where some five hundred pupils from the poorest part of the city attend. Instruction is in England, and all the exercises were such that we could understand. The school was built one story high about a great ringular playground. In one room of girls two Filipino young ladles were in charge. Christmas pictures and decorations made the room gay, and the little girls of about 12 years were reciting Christmas poems and singing Christmas songs. In the class of elder bovs a debate was in progress on the question: Resolved. That the farmer is more serviceable to the country than the merchant. It was a good debate for the boys.

In the last room we visited a class of thirty boys were holding an old-fashioned English spelling match. One-half of the school lined up against the other half. Aside from the wideswake, clean appearance of the pupils, the most promising and inspiring feature of this school was the bright, cheerful, gentlemanly bearing of the teachers and the atmosphere of the school that they cerated. The schools of the Phillippines, if this one was a fair example, are deserving of, all the praise they have received.
